American Consumer Credit Counseling Launches New and Improved Consumer Website

Website focuses on providing individuals more financial education to help improve their money management skills.

April 16, 2008 (NEWTON, MA) – American Consumer Credit Counseling (ACCC) is proud to announce the launch of its new and improved website for consumers seeking credit counseling and financial education. The website (www.consumercredit.com) has increased the amount of resources available through expansion of the major sections of the site. The site's new layout provides easier navigation for consumers, while its new look offers a more friendly atmosphere.

The website (www.consumercredit.com) offers numerous financial resources designed to assist consumers based on their specific needs. Information that can be found on the improved site includes:

- The credit counseling process
- How to choose a credit counseling agency
- Why ACCC
- A must do list for debt management clients
- Agency fee comparison
- Budgeting resources
- Downloadable educational material, and much more

Consumers seeking information about credit counseling, debt management or financial education can visit www.consumercredit.com for all of their needs.
